Summary: Darma. She is 16, had brown hair, grey eyes, and tan skin. To everyone else she is just a new girl in town, but to Joyce and Jim, she is an old friend. One that went missing over a decade ago.

The Girl With No Eye

Darma woke up early. It was a new day and a new school. She pulled on jeans and tucked a white t-shirt into it. She was looking at herself in the mirror when her mom called for her.

"Coming!" She yelled. She grabbed her backpack and ran downstairs.

"Honey, I'm gonna make some coffee then we are going." Her mom said.

"Ok" Darma said, pouring cheerios into a bowl. She started scooping them up into her mouth.

"Alright, I'm done. Go get in the car." She told Darma. Darma nodded and grabbed everything, running outside. Her mom followed in her footsteps, but didn't see her anywhere. She looked around, panic rising in her chest. "Darma? Darma! Where are you sweetheart!" Her mom yelled.

Darma tripped and fell, landing in a cold and slimy spot. She opened her eyes and looked around, seeing her house. But it wasn't her house. It was covered in vines, a sheet of slime.

"Mom!" She yelled. She turned around and ran to the house. When she got there she felt something slick and thin wrap around her legs. She looked down and saw one of the vines twirling around her. She fell over and ripped at the vines. But more came and held her down. She screamed, but no one heard.

Just as she thought it couldn't get worse, a vine dug into her right eye, ripping it out. It dug its way into her skull, and eventually latched on to her brain. She was immediately put into a coma.

Read This! Darma is 16-17 in this. This prologue is set in 1963. Ok I love stranger things so much. It is the best TV show in my opinion. Hope you enjoy this story.
